

Daniel Orenstein

Daniel Orenstein is a Visiting Assistant Professor at the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law, where he currently teaches Administrative Law, Health Care Quality and Safety, and a seminar in Marijuana Law and Policy. His research focuses on health and public health law, with a current concentration on cannabis law and policy, including emerging regulatory approaches, industry structure, and intersections with tobacco and alcohol control. He has previously served as Deputy Director of the Network for Public Health Law Western Region and as adjunct faculty for the University of Arizona and Arizona State University. He holds a J.D. from Arizona State University, a M.P.H. from Harvard, and a B.A. from the University of Arizona, and he also completed a postdoctoral research fellowship at the UCSF Center for Tobacco Control Research and Education.