

Mark Nicholson

Mark Nicholson serves as a solo practitioner providing counsel to clients in all Indiana counties. Mark obtained his Juris Doctorate from Indiana University McKinney School of Law in 2008 and he has extensive trial experience from felony to misdemeanor cases, family law and civil litigation. His vast experience allows him to teach other attorneys. He was a supervisor and trainer of attorneys at the Marion County Public Defender Agency. He is an adjunct professor for the Indiana University McKinney School of Law and he has comprehensive knowledge of Indiana drug laws and the skills in handling these cases. Since Marion County announced that the prosecutor's office will no longer prosecute simple possession of marijuana cases, Mark Nicholson has assisted his clients in obtaining expungements to remove arrests or convictions for marijuana possession.
